Spring Clean 2009

Friday 6th & Saturday 7th March are set aside for OxClean to build on last year's success when 1,500 people in almost 100 different groups turned out for a two-hour local pick and seemed to have a great time doing that. Take a look at www.oxclean.org.uk to see what this annual event is all about. More importantly, OxClean urgently needs a working group to register NOW if they want to tackle something in their area.

OxClean Spring Clean 2009
oxclean.org.uk

This way, litter pickers and other essential materials can be organised for those who need them, alongside the essential collection of rubbish gathered up. What's bugging you, around Osney? Find just a few others who share your concern, and you're all ready to sign up. When you've done that, call at 112 Bridge Street for a window sticker to promote the event and encourage others to do their bit.

The OIRA AGM

This will take place on April 22. Details to be announced in the next newsletter.

Open gardens

This popular biannual event will take place on Sunday May 17. We need about 12 gardens – a mixture of the known-and-loved and new entries to make this event go with a swing. If you would like to open your garden or could offer other services such as serving teas, making homemade cakes or manning the plant stall, please contact Anna Truelove on 245496 or drop a note through 83 Bridge St.

OIRA website

As you know the OIRA website has been down for several months now. It is currently being redesigned and should be up and running again in February/March.

A BIT OF LOCAL HISTORY

Oxford Marmalade

Those of you up to your eyes in marmalade-making may like to read about Frank Cooper's Original Oxford marmalade. From Roy Hoare:

In Sainsbury's recently, I felt a tug at my sleeve: 'Would you kindly pass me down a jar of Coopers Original Oxford Marmalade' asked a gentleman in a wheelchair. As this was one of my own favourites, we had a short chat and touched on the history of the brand as follows.

In the 1870s Frank and Sarah Cooper ran their Italian warehouse at No.84 The High, (now the Grand Café). They sold foreign and home produced fruit and vegetables displayed in boxes and wicker baskets with hams and continental sausages hung above among the gas lamps. In 1875 Sarah made her first batch of marmalade, 100 lbs. or so, probably from the Seville oranges that her husband hadn't sold. This batch and subsequent ones were made in the kitchen of the old Angel Hotel at No.82. The distinctive salt glaze jars were returnable for a penny each. Some jars were decorated with pictures of the Martyr's Memorial and Magdalen Tower. It became a 'must have' item for College scouts for their 'gentlemen' and returning the empties were their perks.

Frank Cooper recognised that the University graduates were their best advertising medium, carrying off this toothsome conserve to other counties and the Empire. He secured military patronage by sending samples to the elite regiments such as the Life Guards and the Grenadiers, with the promise that they could be supplied at their overseas stations. A quantity was packed in soldered tins for Captain Scott's Arctic expedition. Over time the patronage of eminent people ensured the success of the brand. Among those expressing their appreciation were the Prince of Wales, the Bishop of London, the Dukes of Marlborough, the Governor of Madras and some 50 other lords. It is now supplied by appointment to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and no Fortnum and Masons hamper is complete without Coopers preserves.

Apart from marmalade, much of the raw materials for Cooper's bottled fruit, chutney and their eye-watering horseradish sauce, was grown on Twenty Pound Meadow, our own Osney Allotments, where the roots still thrive today.

The Factories and Workshops Act of 1901 caused the manufacturing to be moved to a custom built factory opposite the Said Business School. Coopers has since changed hands and been moved to a new home in Spalding, Lincolnshire. Wherever it is made, it still hits the spot on breakfast toast.

Chimney sweeps

From Roy Hoare; Chimney sweeps planting sooty kisses on blushing brides was once considered good luck, but now it is a custom of the past, as both parties are rather rare. No longer are the few remaining sweeps the grimy individuals with cloth cap and overalls but clinically white-coated operatives who vacuum away every smut.

Before 1864, their predecessors, the Sweep Masters and their journeymen employed climbing boys to shin up flues and brush down the soot. These climbing boys and some girls were taken into so-called apprenticeships upon payment of perhaps 5 guineas to the parents, whereupon the child would become the property of the Sweep Master. An item in Jackson's Oxford Journal of 16th Nov. 1764 shows that John Lay, apprentice to Richard Dormer, had absconded and a reward of half-a-crown (25p in today's money) was offered for his return. The article gave his full description and forbade anyone to harbour or entertain him.

The so-called apprenticeship consisted of a brief period of watching, then being thrust into the flue with an experienced boy behind; any reluctance on the part of the 'tyro' would prompt the slapping or pricking of his feet. The discomfort and horrific conditions they experienced resulted in scrapes, burns, sore eyes and constant chest infections. In their later years many suffered from cancers of the lips and scrotum, which was known as the sweeps cancer and rarely seen elsewhere.

Major accidents were commonplace. In March 1813 an eight-year-old boy named Pitt became firmly stuck in a chimney that had only recently been extinguished. After part of the chimney had been demolished, he was found to be dead and his elbows and knees had been burnt to the bone. These incidents were deemed to be accidental deaths. A law was passed in 1864 to end this horrendous practice but not without some opposition in Government. One noble enquired, 'How would I know that my chimneys were being swept properly?'

In the early 17th century Italians from Piedmont came to England to work as sweeps. Today, in the first week of September each year, hundreds of chimney sweeps meet at Santa Maria Maggiore in Piedmont. A brotherhood of sweeps meet to drink, and generally 'whoop it up'. A museum to their profession was opened there in 1975 and has become their Mecca. It also serves as a memorial to the many children who endured such suffering.

PEOPLE

Welcome to the newest addition to West Street, Albert Jude Utton, born on November 16 2008 and weighing a very bonny 9lb 10 oz. Congratulations to Parents Dom and Heidi and big sister Eithne.

Cuckoos

Man of the moment is Mike Bayliss of East St, seen on BBC2 recently giving David Attenborough a helping hand with a programme about cuckoos. Mike started to study birds 40 years ago and then in 1988 won the cuckoo egg counting record when he counted 25 eggs from the same bird. Mike, who had worked with David Attenborough before, did a lot of the filming between Sandford and Radley. As Mike says "the cuckoo has to overcome many obstacles to reproduce, and so guarantee that an iconic sound of spring remains part of our lives."

The Big Garden Birdwatch

From Julia Hamer-Hunt; Oxford University does the Big Garden Birdwatch Sat 24 & Sun 25 January, 10:00 am – 4:00 pm, Oxford University Parks, Keble Gate Entrance, Parks Road, Oxford. It's the largest wildlife survey in the world with over 400,000 people now taking part. This year, you can do your bit by helping us find out who lives in the beautiful parks of Oxford University. It's so easy. The birdwatch only takes an hour of your time, so why not make it into a trip out for your friends and family? You don't need to be an expert – just turn up on the day and bring your enthusiasm – the RSPB will be on hand to show you how it's done.

Red scarf

A long red scarf was left at 3 North St over the Christmas period and is waiting to be claimed. Tel: 793360.
